

If we claim to know our experience, how can we avoid falling into dualism? Prajna, pre-knowing, is the state prior to knowing and naming.

Zazen is the practice of prajna. We can also call it intimacy, because there is no separation. We can also call it illumination; not because each thing is brighter, but because it is no longer smudged by the fog of the self.